

My travel time aboard a airline should be a quiet restful journey. It's bad enough that a person has to listen to a person yakking on their cell phone, but with some of the newer ones, (Nextel), you have to hear both sides of the conversation plus all the beeps. I can't believe that there is anything so important, that a person can't wait until landing to call someone. Or else create a quiet soundproof are for persons to make their calls. Don't open a can of worms and make life miserable on the plane. No one is going to quit flying just because they can't call someone for a few hours. But I might look at other modes of transportation if they are allowed to place / receive calls while I'm trying to rest.

Thank you for your time and for allowing the public to have it's say.

Thomas M. Jesinski